The Aetherius, Latin for “of the air,” home plan is a unique blend of elegance and functionality inspired by the architect Frank Lloyd Wright. On the main floor a water wall provides a sense of tranquility. The stacked stone fireplace, karanji wood, slate, cork and soapstone used throughout the home are true to the visions of Frank Lloyd Wright. Between the main and lower levels is a secret room that serves as the wine cellar. Downstairs are four bedrooms with sliding glass doors. The theater creates a sense of being at a private screening with its elevated seating arrangement. On the third level is the library and beyond that the master suite where a see-through fireplace provides heat and ambiance on a cool evening. The view from almost every room makes you feel as though you are floating in the air.
